One disaster led to another, and the boom towns went down like a house of cards for lack of financial support But Buena Vista, as we have said, had already established several industries and had formed the nucleus of a town. Most of these were continued and are have since sorung up around them, and Buena Vista is one of the most flourishing towns in the Valley.

The late Constitutional Convention was The late Constitutional Convention was the ablest body of men assembled in Virginia in forty years. This convention provided for the passage of a Torrens system of registration of land titles. Shall the Legislature now fall to carry out that wise provision?

There is one phase of this question which is too delicate to be discussed in the public print; but it ought to be appa rent, without discussion, to any white man that there is a nameless crime is exaggerated and made more horrible when the brutal assailant has a dark skin. How can any decent white man take a different view?

The proceedings under the Torrens law to register a title to land are not obligatory—they are optional. If this owner of the land does not want a Torrens title, he can keep the one he has. Why refuse the many who want a Torrens title, the benefit of this law, merely because some land-owners do not want one.

EMPORIA, VA., Februry 22.—A most amusing situation has developed in Emporia, in connecction with the Western Union Telegraphi Company messengers boy strike, which was inaugurated a few days aso, but which become fully understood to-day.

For some years the company has had in its employes small boys ranging in age from ten to twelve years, and paid a nominal salary for the work done by the messenger, the perquisites, however, for out-of-town messages making the position quite lucrative.

A few days ago the chief messenger, Young Council, "struck flat," upon the ground that the salary was not commensurate with the work and the responsibility incident to the position. He was relieved and the local management made a break for another small boy, but the feetive Council had put the lack wise and nothing was doing, although some dozen or so were approached and offerad the position.

Council seems to have things his way at present, as no amount of persysteion or offers of increase in salary will tempt the friends of the ex-messenger to break the boycott.

Many are of the opinion that slumps in values and in business follow fairs, but the following special from St. Louis shows that just the reverse is true:

The boom in realty continues. The old saying of "dirt cheap" does not apply to St. Louis, nor has it at any time during the past two years.

"In a report submitted to the Business Men's League, Festus J. Wade, chairman of the real estate and taxation committee, has this to say: "While there were 4,606 houses erected during the world's fair year, at a cost of $14,075,791, in the year 1905 there were $,220 houses constructed, at a cost of $23,204,164. o-day passed the first and second readings without amendment, of the government's proposal to extend reciprocal tar-

The chancellor said he placed a high value on good political relations between Germany and the United States which were a blessing to both lands, but it would be deceptive to believe that he would buy political friendship by the sacrifice of Germany's economic interests. The grounds of the government's proposal were that a tariff war which must only be resorted to in case of hecessity, would damage not only Germany's shipping interests but other important departments of industry. Although the United States would be injured in its exports, which had grown considerably, the advantage of such a war would rest with a third country. The chancellor presumably meant Great Britain.
